

By validating on the client side, you can detect and handle errors earlier, providing a better user experience and better feedback.

By validating on the server side, this ensures that data transmitted over the network is valid and in the correct format. We can't know if the data has been changed or not during the transmission

Finally, in my opinion, the more testing the better because it will help us avoid unnecessary errors.